

Summary of Austin's Documentation

After reviewing Austin's documentation on the Learning Paths site, we determined that it was very helpful for setting up the right environment to create the necessary parts of the site. However, it does not give many detailed specifications for the actual application that was created. It gives a good breakdown of the overall system and how it is separated, but the specifics of each section are a bit unclear. In addition, the documentation does not explain very clearly how to integrate all of the different parts of the application together (the front end, crawler, database, recommender, etc.). It does a good job explaining how future edits are to be made, but does not give much insight as to how the current application was designed and constructed.
